

Karen McCarron – Life Coach

The Legend of Balinese DonMu – Book One (Part II of III) – Chapter 18

“But anyway ...” I said turning back to Lakeisha and fixing my eyes on hers. “That Karen McCarron girl I was just talking about?”

“Yeah.”

“Well ... she’s a Life Coach.”

She started cracking up.

“Are you serious?! Isn’t she like 25?”

“Yeah. 25 or 26.”

“Jesus, that’s crazy. How much does she charge an hour?”

“$250”

“$250 an hour?!” Now fully busting up. “For a 25yr old Life Coach?! Damn.”

“She like Life Coach lawyer.” Wing cackled.

“Yeah, I know. It’s crazy. But it might kinda make sense too since anyone who’s gonna hire her for a Life Coach is probably going to pay her whatever she wants, I mean it’s not like someone’s gonna be deciding between a bunch of 25yr Life Coaches and then pick the one who’s fee’s the most reasonable. They probably only picked her cause she’s hot.”

“Or they want to bang her.” Wing added.

“Hmmm ... yeah or that too.” I conceded. “But anyway ... Wing’s already set up a fake ‘Catfish’ Instagram account for me with a bunch of fake followers, or Bots, or whatever they are. So it looks real. And where I’m a dorky 17yr high school senior who’s about to go off to college and is confused about what he wants to do with his life and needs her Life Coach advice.”

“Ok.” She said.

“And just like we talked about earlier – about narcissists and trying to change them and get them to see the other side of things – I kinda wanna do the same thing with her. And test out her thinking and mindset from the beginning of this thing and follow it through to the end. To see if she changes, or grows, or learns anything. Like the narcissist who’s always right and never wrong. Maybe I can get proof of something she did that was wrong and show it to her later to see if she’ll admit it or not?”

“Alright.”

Then tilted my head to the side. “... Because ...” Thinking about this some more. “I also noticed she has a bunch of hashtags and other stuff on her social media accounts indicating how Woke she was and a part of all these great social movements, like #MeToo, BLM. LGBTQ, etc. And quite frankly I'm not even sure if she actually knows what they mean ... believes in them ... or if she's just full of shit."

Lakeisha chuckled.

"So, anyway." I said turning back to Wing who was now poking through some leftover pork sausages with his fork. "Wing?" I said eyeing him more closely. "Since I don't want to pay $250/hr., is there any way you can doctor up some fake Venmo or PayPal receipts, that look real, so I could send those to her in lieu of real payment?"

He didn't even hesitate.

"Oh yeah, no problem. I already hack her phone."

Huh? "Really?"

"Yeah, hers and others' too."

"Wow ... how'd you do that?"

"I put spyware on link to website and credit card system, so I got all their phones now. That easy."

"Cool." I said impressed.

"They never click on obvious spam, but something they want, they definitely click on."

"Awesome. So does that mean we can do anything we want to them?"

"Well ... not anything. But can definitely send fake Venmo or PayPal receipts that she think are real. But can't hack her bank account or anything. So hopefully she don't dig around too much cause then she find out there no Venmo money in there." Chuckling.

"Nice." I said rather impressed with Wing's hacking abilities. "And that's perfect too, cause I've already been texting with her and told her I might want to do the first one today. So ..." I looked at him more closely. "Do you think can you set this up for me ... like now?"

"Now?!" He jerked his head up.

"Yes ..." I smiled. "Pretty please?"

"Ugghhh ..." He moaned and put down his fork and grabbed his laptop. "Ok. Let me find Venmo template or something." Grumbling some more as I turned back over to Olof and Lakeisha while also nodding my head up and down like ... Wow, he's pretty good ... I mean I knew Made and the beach ladies had all said he was a really good computer hacker but I was still a little bit unsure after seeing his ... eating habits, mannerisms, style of dress, personal hygiene, never-ending massages ... plus I did have to wonder how someone could be so good at computer hacking yet so simple and child-like in so many of life's other endeavors. And guessed I had to chalk it up it to one of life's little mysteries.

He then poked his head up.

"Ok, got it."

Damn, that was fast.

"Ok, great." I said staring at him. "Let me text her and see if she's free now."

I then grabbed my phone and started searching through it for Karen's number, found it, typed the message in it, hit 'Send' and looked back over at the group.

"Ok, let's see what she says ..."

Wing then peered back over at me. "Well, I don't wanna wait here all ..."

PING!

"Oooohh!" He got excited. "That her?"

I looked at my phone.

"Yeah, it's her." I said eyes getting wide.

“What she say?” He grinned.

I started reading the message.

“Busy now ... but maybe later today ... or tomorrow ...” I frowned. “Awww, crap.”

He then appeared to be pondering something else. “Tell her you pay her double if she do it right now.” Starting to giggle. “I mean it free right?” While the three of us giggled too.

“Ok, good thinking.” I smiled back at him. Then typed that into my phone, hit ‘Send’ and looked back at the group. When ...

PING!

He started snickering again. “Damn, she really want that $500 bucks.”

I started snickering too. Then looked back at my phone and started reading the text.

“She says she will do it ... and is gonna call me right ...”

RING!

“... now.”

More laughter from the group.

“Ok. Shhhhhh ... Quiet you guys.” I said with my finger to my lips. “And don’t make me laugh or anything. Or make any funny faces. I don’t want to blow this thing, ok?” Now starting to put the phone to my mouth. “And just a head’s up, I told her my name’s Timmy so I’m gonna change my voice to sound like a depressed and confused 17yr old high school kid who’s trying to figure out what he wants to do with his life and needs her Life Coach advice. So don’t laugh at my pathetic attempt at this voice, ok? Don’t blow it for me, ok?” Looking directly at Wing who was still giggling.

I gave them all one last ... don’t make me laugh look ... took a deep breath and clicked the ‘Accept’ button on my phone.

“Hiiiiii Karennnn.” I said all nasally and whiny.

She didn’t say anything back right away. Probably still trying to figure out this puzzling first impression of Timmy. Then finally spoke up.

“Yeah. Hi Timmy.”

“How are youuuuu?” I said even more whiney.

“Uhhhh ... I’m fine.” Then got right down to business. “Look, I don’t have a lot of time right now ... I had to clear a bunch of things off my schedule to fit you in. Which is fine. You said you’d pay double. So I’m ok with that. But first things first. Do you have Venmo or PayPal?”

“Ummmm ... I have Venmo?”

“Ok cool. Just send that over right now so we can get that part of it out of the way.”

I looked over at Wing. Who grinned. Turned his laptop around. Showed us the fake Venmo receipt for $500 bucks on it. Giggled. And hit ‘Send’.

We then waited a couple of seconds and heard the ‘Ping’ on her end of the phone.

“Ok. Got it ... so ... what do you want to do with your life?”

Great first question from a Life Coach.

“Well ... I definitely want to be Woke.”

“Yeah ok. That’s good. I mean being Woke is pretty much the wave of the future. So that’s a good start.”

“And actually, believe it or not, I’m thinking of becoming a Life Coach like you. Cause I think I’d be really good at it. So what do you think about that?”

We could almost hear her chuckling under her breath.

“Well ... I’ll just tell you right now that becoming a successful Life Coach is a lot harder than you think. I mean you have to be really smart. And incredibly knowledgeable. On a lot of different subjects. And intuitive too. About people. You really have to be a people person. And know what makes them tick. If you want to become a successful Life Coach.”

“Hmmm ...” I wondered. “How’d you get to become one?”

“Well ... I read a lot. A lot of books. And social media posts. Plus I’m really smart. I got like straight A’s in school so never really had to study all that much. Or really read. Plus I have an old soul. My own personal guru and Life Coach told me I was Buddhist monk in my past life so that’s like still inside me. Like ingrained in my soul.”

I had to stare at the floor cause I knew if I made eye contact with the others I’d just lose it.

“So Timmy. You’re like in High School, right? A Senior? I saw your Insta page and you definitely need some help with that. But first things first, where you going to college?”

“Well ...” I thought about that. “That’s the thing ... I’m still trying to figure that out.” Trying to sound as indecisive as possible. “Like I said, I’m thinking of becoming a full-time Life Coach, so if I do that, I won’t really have time to go to college.”

“Yeah, I don’t know if that’s such a good idea.” She said.

“However, if I do go to college then I’ll probably have to give up on my dreams of becoming a full-time Life Coach.” Then paused. “But ... if I drop out of high school and don’t go to college and follow my dreams of becoming a Life Coach then I’ll probably have to hire you full-time to help me out with it.”

We could almost see the dollar signs light up in her eyes.

“Well, they do always say that ‘Fortune favors the Brave’.” She quickly replied. “And some of the most successful people in human history have all dropped out of high school or didn’t go to college. I mean, just look at Bill Gates, Elon Musk, or Paris Hilton.” Olof spit out his sausage. While I remembered that Bill and Elon just didn’t finish college. “They also say that in order to achieve greatness you have to risk everything. And I really believe that to be true.”

“Yeah ... I think you’re right. Go big or go home, right?!” I said trying to sound like some kind of newly-inspired sloth.

“Absolutely! Shoot for the moon and you’ll land among the stars!” Probably unsure of how the quote really goes. “We only regret the chances we don’t take. The real risk is in doing nothing. If you want to achieve greatness stop asking for permission. We only miss the opportunities we don’t take.” She was now just rattling off whatever was on the quote-of-the-day calendar in front of her.

“Yes!” I rejoiced like a dying frog finally catching a fly. “I love how inspiring you are. It really makes me want to drop everything and follow my dreams!”

“Can I ask you something else Timmy?” Now taking the air out of me. “That might be a bit personal ... and please don’t get offended by this or anything because that’s not my intention. I’m just going off what I saw on your Insta page.”

“Huh ...? Yeah, sure ... I guess so.” I paused and gave off two little wheezing coughs for effect.

“Are you gay?”

“What?!! ... Noooooo ...” I protested very weakly. “Why would you say that?”

“I mean don’t get offended or anything. I’m totally Woke, so you know you’re safe with me. I was just guessing that based on what I saw on your Insta page and our very brief conversation here.”

“I have a girlfriend.” I half-insisted.

“Seriously?!” She sounded rather surprised. Probably because of the hideous pictures Wing put on there of me. I mean of Timmy.

“Yes. And we are in love.” I said glowingly. Then changed back to all sad and pathetic. “But right now she’s going off with a bunch of other guys to a BLM rally and I wasn’t invited.” Now moaning.

“Are you frickin’ serious?!” She said sounding like she knew exactly what was going on and probably did that herself to a bunch of guys. “Your girlfriend went off to a BLM rally with a bunch of other guys and didn’t invite you?”

“Yeeeaahh ...” I moaned.

“Can I ask you something else?”

“Suuuurrrreeee.” I answered.

“Are they black guys?”

I paused a second. Then replied. “Yeeaaahhhhhh ... why?”

“Jesus Frickin’ Christ Timmy.” Now sounding like she was fully-laughing at me. “Cause if a girl goes off with a bunch of ...”

“Mr. Jeff!! Mr. Jeff!!” Agus all of a sudden came running outside yelling like a maniac.

What the hell?!! I looked over while trying to cover up the phone and gesturing to him to keep his voice down.

“What was that?!” Karen blurted out as I panicked and quickly tried to find the mute button on my phone.

“Mr. Jeff! Mr. Jeff!” He continued. “There something coming up the dirt road! Something unknown coming!”

Dammit Agus, keep it down. Still trying to find the mute button.

“What the hell’s going on over there?” Karen sounded confused. “It sounds like someone’s yelling at you?”

“No ... No.” I flustered. Frantically looking around. “It’s just some guys on the street. I think they’re coming to beat me up?” ... I couldn’t think of anything better on the spot ... “I gotta go Karen! Sorry, I gotta go ... I gotta call you back later!”

“But I’m busy later!” She shouted back.

“Yeah ... well ... I don’t know what to tell you ... I got a situation here ...” And was about to put my finger on the ‘End Call’ button when I heard her cry out.

“This counts as your full session! No refunds!!”

Karen McCarron – Life Coach (#2)

The Legend of Balinese DonMu – Book One (Part II of III) – Chapter 30

I looked over at Olof and Wing. Then back at Karen on the monitor. With the beautiful purple-crimson hue still glistening off her tired and sweaty little body. And kinda felt bad for her out there. Noticing how fatigued and tired she looked. Having just made quota for not only herself, but for all four of them. And now just standing there. All alone. Next to four big piles of rice. Hacking away some more. And I really respected that about her. And thought that was really nice of her to do.

Olof looked over at her too. Apparently really respecting that about her as well. Nodding his head up and down – with a big old smile on his face – almost like a proud parent himself. Then turned back to me.

“This would be a great time for a Life Coach call.” He said snickering away as Wing snickered alongside him. “Oh yeah, she so mad right now. It perfect time.” He cackled.

I looked back at them. Thinking about that some more. Then thought about Indah. And me wanting to show her we were actually doing some kind of good up here. And producing some positive results. Then thought about Karen. And the woke trap I had for her. And wondered if that was actually good or not. Then thought about the Klan guys. And the plans I had with them. And realized that none of my plans seemed to be working out too well. Then turned back to Olof and Wing – seeing their excited little faces – and thought ... maybe this time things will work out and something good will come out of it? ... so smiled back at them, pulled out my phone, found Karen’s number on it, hit ‘Call’, and we all watched as she pulled out her phone, saw Timmy’s name on it, flip it off and send it straight to voicemail.

Wing giggled. “Oooohh, she so mad right now. Tell her you’ll pay her $500 for an emergency 10min Life Coach call. See what she say.” Laughing even harder.

I smiled. Shrugged my shoulders. Sent the text. And we all watched as her eyes lit up.

But before I could even pull her number up ...

RING!

Damn, that was fast.

We saw her standing there. Out in the rice fields. Phone in her hand. Still upset. But possibly feeling a little better now that she was about to make a quick $500 bucks. So I did my best to try and compose myself and change my voice back to all gooey and pathetic. Like Timmy. And clicked the ‘Accept’ button on my phone.

“Hi Kareeeennnn.” I answered all whiny.

She rolled her eyes.

“What’s up? I don’t have a lotta time right now.”

“What are you doooooiiing?”

“I’m frickin’ working!” Throwing her hands in the air and looking disgusted. “You got that $500 bucks? You should probably send that over right now.”

“Ooookaaayyy ...” I whimpered. Then looked over at Wing. Who turned his laptop around. Showed us the fake Venmo receipt for $500 on it. Smiled. And hit ‘Send’.

We then heard the ‘Ping’ on Karen’s end of the phone.

“Ok, got it ... so ... tell me why your life sucks right now.”

I tried not to laugh. And took a deep breath.

“Well ... I feel hurt. And offended ... by my girlfriend. And feel like she’s been micro-aggressing me by telling me it’s not a good idea for me to go to the BLM rally with her and her new friends. And feel like I really need to talk to someone about it like you, who are so woke and understanding about these things.”

“Yeah ... well, you’ve got about 9 minutes left cause I’m really busy here.” Then added. “By the way ... how the hell can you afford this shit aren’t you like in high school?”

I paused on that. Trying to figure out the best answer.

“Well, my parents are rich. And they told me that getting a Life Coach would be a really good thing for me. Especially after my last three psychiatrists didn’t really work out too well. So they just told me I could pick whatever I wanted to and they would pay for it because they were pretty much at their wits end.”

We could almost see the dollar signs light up in her eyes again.

I then looked at my phone a bit more seriously now.

“But you’re a good Life Coach, right Karen? And a successful at it?”

“Oh yeah. Definitely. I have almost ten-thousand followers on Insta and am pretty much at Micro-Level now. I just haven’t posted anything in a while cause I’ve been really busy with all my other successful businesses. But as soon as I start posting again I’ll be at Micro-Level in no time, then I’ll get up to Macro, and then pretty much know all the major celebrities.”

Hmmmm ... even Timmy had to wonder about that one.

“Ok ...” I continued. “But anyway ... what do you think I should do here? Do you think I should go to the rally to show her how woke and supportive I am of her and her cause?”

“Listen up.” She resumed. “Here’s what you gotta do. You’re gotta go to the rally and surprise her. Don’t tell her you’re coming and just show up unannounced. Girls love it when guys show up unannounced and surprise them. Especially when they’re least expecting it.”

“Hmmmm ... yeah, I guess girls do like it when guys show up unannounced and give them little surprises huh?” Now getting the sense that she was setting me up for the Life Coach long-con.

“You need to be woke in today’s day and age and sensitive to other people’s needs. And in order to do that you need to have your social media pages full of all kinds of shit like going to BLM rallies, LGBTQ marches, and #MeToo movements.”

“Yeeeaahhh ... girls do like guys who are sensitive and woke, huh?”

“Oh yeah. Today’s modern woman wants a guy who’s woke and sensitive to their needs, and talks about his feelings and isn’t afraid to cry, and is gender fluid. Because that’s all going to be on the right side of history.”

Timmy wondered about that one too.

“You also need to take a lot of selfies there. With other people who are also part of that movement. Cause then people will associate you with them. And think you’re part of them. And popular. And then they will like your posts. Which will generate a lot more self-esteem and confidence for you.”

“Hmmmm ... yeeaaahhhh ... I guess that does kinda make sense.” I said.

All of a sudden, we heard a loud steam whistle go off in the background.

“What was that?” I said. Figuring it must be dinner time now. “Was that some kind of steam whistle?!”

“Oh crap, I gotta go.”

“Go?”

“Yeah, your time’s up.”

“What do you mean my time’s up? It’s only been like 5 minutes. And I’ve already paid you the full ...”

Then heard a click.

“... $500 dollars ...”

“Hello ...?”

Karen McCarron – Life Coach (#3)

The Legend of Balinese DonMu – Book One (Part III of III) – Chapter 34

The main dining hall was almost full by 9:25am. With our guests slowly starting to filter their way back in and head over to their assigned tables. One-by-one. As Olof, Wing and I just sat there in the secret control room watching it all over the monitors and waiting for Lakeisha to come back in and collect the cards.

We then spotted Karen standing off by herself in one of the corners of the room. Just standing there all alone. With her back up against the wall. Watching everything going on with an odd look to her face like she had just given a hand-job for a secret mystery card and didn't want anyone else to know about it.

Olof then turned to me.

"You should give her a Life Coach call right now while she's just standing there." Chuckling along as Wing chuckled alongside him. Also thinking that was a good idea. "Oh yeah. This is perfect time. Right after she give me hand-job. Probably have lot of good insight now."

I thought about that. Then thought about Indah. And Ketut. And my plan to stop doing all this and wrap my part up in it.

"Yeah, I don't know you guys. It might not be a good idea to do that to her anymore?"

"What?!" Olof's eyes shot open. "What the hell are you talking about? This was your whole idea to do this to her in the first place. To set up this whole fake Life Coach thing so you could track and monitor her progress – and see if you could get her to change – and show her the other side of things. And that she's totally full of shit. Which we pretty much know is true now so what the hell happened to that?"

"Yeah, Bule Jeff, what the heck happened to that?" Wing looked at me confused as well.

Awww, man. Cause they were right. This was my whole idea to do this to her in the first place. And now I started to feeling guilty again. And getting sucked back in. Cause I didn't want to let the guys down. Geez I'm always so indecisive and trying to please people. But I also knew that I wasn't going to tell them about my new plan of becoming a metaphorical Balinese rice farmer until after the four of us were back together – which technically hadn't happened yet – so I figured maybe I could do one last Life Coach call with them, just for one last laugh, I mean what could it really hurt?

So I gave 'em a funny little look back. Pulled out my phone. Scrolled through it to find Karen's number on it, found it, hit 'Call', and the three of us watched as she pulled out her phone, saw Timmy's name on it and – as usual – flip it off.

Wing of course started giggling. "Text her your life in crisis right now and that you pay her $1,000 for 5min emergency Life Coach call. See how good Life Coach she is."

I somewhat smirked at that, typed it into my phone, hit 'Send', and the three of us watched as she wrote something back.

"$2,000"

I chuckled and showed it to the guys.

They both started cracking up. "Good thing we have fake Venmo receipts." Wing grinned deviously.

I replied back to her.

“Ok. But my life is in crisis right now. Life-or-death kind of stuff.”

“Venmo first. Then I’ll call you.”

It’s nice to have a Life Coach who’s so readily available.

Wing then opened up his laptop. Started creating the fake $2,000 Venmo receipt on it. Got it all set up. Showed it to us. Giggled. And hit ‘Send’.

We then watched as her eyes lit up.

My phone immediately rang. So I took a deep breath.

“Hiiiiii Karrrrreeennnnn...” I said all whiny.

She rolled her eyes. “God, you’re so frickin’ needy Timmy. Here’s a little Life Coach advice for you ... girls don’t like needy guys.”

I tried to suppress a laugh. Then re-compose myself.

“But I thought you said girls like guys who were sensitive to other people’s needs and woke?”

“Lord, you’re so frickin’ clueless.” She muttered under her breath.

“Huh? What?” I whimpered.

“Look Timmy, let’s get right down to it cause I don’t have a lot of time right now and you’re spending a lot of money on this shit. So just tell me what happened when you showed up at the BLM rally and surprised your girlfriend.”

I paused. And thought about how to best answer that. Then looked over at Olof and Wing for some kind of help but they were both snickering under their breaths. So I tried to think of something else when Olof finally whispered something I couldn’t quite understand so I pressed the mute button on my phone.

“Huh? What’d you say?”

“I said, tell her you caught her having sex in the alleyway there.”

“What?! Seriously?!”

“Oh, yeah.” Wing giggled. “That be too funny.”

“Timmy, are you there?” Karen said. “Where the fuck are you?!”

“Oh yeah, yeah ...” I unmuted the phone. “I’m here, I’m here ... Ummmm ... well, that’s why I said I’m in crisis mode right now cause when I showed up there I caught her having sex in the alleyway.”

“Wait, What?!”

Oh boy.

“Yeeaahhh.” I moaned.

“With who? ... you mean the black guys she went to the rally with?”

I stopped a moment. Unsure of how to answer that. Until Olof answered for me in his best Timmy voice.

“Yesss!!”

“Oh shit!!” Karen sounded shocked. “Are you frickin’ serious?!”

Oh man. I just shook my head.

“Like ... with all of them?” She asked.

“Yes!!” Olof said again falling out of his chair.

Goddammit.

“Holy shit Timmy! Holy shit! You mean you caught her having sex with ALL those black guys?! Like they were running a train on her?!”

“Yes. It was horrible!” Olof said still halfway out of his chair.

Oh man, I’m burning in hell for this.

“Holy shit Timmy! ... Holy Shit!!” We saw Karen’s startled expression through the monitor. “Goddamn, that’s fucked up. That is seriously fucked up.”

Lord, I’ve got some serious issues.

“Yeah ... and now I don’t know what to do because she told me I needed to be woke and understanding about it and realize that people needed to explore their own sexual paths and that I needed to explore my own sexual path too.”

“Wait ... she said that to you?”

“Uh huh.”

“When?”

Awww, crap.

“When she was in the middle of it.”

“Wait, what?!” She now looked even more startled. “Like when she was in the middle of getting banged? Like during it all? Like while they were running a train on her she said that to you?!”

“Uh huh.” I said shaking my head while Olof and Wing were still bent over in their chairs laughing uncontrollably.

“Hoooooly shit Timmy!! Hooooly shit!!”

“Yes, it was horrible.”

“Yeah, I fucking bet it was horrible. I fucking bet it was. So ... wait ... like while she was getting banged, with one guy in her and the other guys standing around waiting their turns, she was like ... telling you things ... like you needed to be woke and understanding?”

I dropped my head.

“Uh huh.”

“Holy Shit Timmy! Holy shit, that’s fucked up! Damn, so what were you thinking ... while she was saying this to you... while you were watching your girlfriend getting banged by all those black dudes?”

“I don’t know. It was very confusing.” I said still staring at the floor and wondering what the hell was wrong with me.

“Yeah, I fucking bet it was. That’s frickin’ hardcore.”

I just shook my head.

“Look Timmy. I’m gonna ask you this one more time. And I want you to keep an open mind here, so don’t go jumping to any conclusions ... or off a bridge or anything ... not just yet. But are you by chance attracted to guys? Or black guys? Or have any kind of hidden feelings for them?”

“Huh?! What?!” I sounded confused. “Nooooo ... I mean ... why do you ask that? Do you think I might be gay or something?”

“Oh yeah, definitely. Or at least transitioning. And you should probably look into that more cause it’s definitely the wave of the future.”

Timmy just sat there on the other end of the phone. Wondering about all that.

“Look Timmy.” She continued. “While you were watching your girlfriend get a train run on her by all those black dudes, and they were laughing at you, what were your thoughts on it all? Like what was going on in your head?”

“I thought that it was horrible and my life was over.”

“Yeah, I bet you did. I fucking bet you did. But I mean, sexually. What were your thoughts sexually on it. Did it turn you on at all?”

“Whaaaatttt?! ... Nooooo ... I mean, I don’t really know. It was all very confusing. I didn’t know what to think?”

“Well, luckily for you you’ve got me to do your thinking for you. And I think you might have liked it. And been turned on by it. By your girlfriend getting banged by all those black dudes. And you really are secretly gay – or at least Bi – definitely Bi. And since you already know that being gay, bi, or trans, is the wave of the future then you really need to start exploring those feelings some more and stop feeling sorry for yourself all the time. I mean obviously something is wrong with you and the sooner you figure that out the better cause all your whining, bitching and moaning isn’t the answer for you. You need to wake the fuck up. And be woke. And grow a pair of balls already.”

“Listen up!!” Mama’san roared through her bullhorn as the guests in the main dining hall started shuffling about in their seats.

“Oh shit! I gotta go.” Karen quickly spoke up.

“Wait, what?!”

“Yeah, I gotta go.”

“But I’m in crisis mode!”

“Yeah, well your time’s up.”

“But it hasn’t been 5 minutes ...”

CLICK.

“... yet ...”