

Mama'san Arrives

The Legend of Balinese DonMu – Book One (Part II of III) – Chapter 19

“Jesus Agus! What is it?!” I said all panicky and confused as Olof, Wing and Lakeisha looked on all panicky and confused too. “What are you yelling about?!”

“Mr. Jeff! There is strange cloud of dust approaching. With strange sound in background!” He cried out finally getting right next to us, bent over, hands on his knees, panting. After only a 30yd sprint.

“Is it the cops, Agus?!”

He tried to catch his breath, still bent over, huffing and puffing, then finally recovered and peered back up at us. “I’m not sure who it is, Mr. Jeff! Come to edge of verandah and see for selves.”

The four of us looked around at each other then quickly hopped up out of our seats and hurried over to the edge of the verandah, putting our hands on the railing and squinting out into the distance to get a better look of who – or what – might be coming up the dirt-cobblestone road.

We could definitely see the cloud of dust getting closer. And hear the faint buzzing sound in the background growing louder – like a swarm of bees approaching – but still couldn’t quite make out who, or what, it was. And I immediately thought back on the roaming hordes of monkeys down in Ubud – ransacking their way up here – but then thought ... no way... there’s no way those monkeys could make it up this far north. There would be too many other villages to raid in between.

So what the hell?

Then as the dust-cloud got closer, and the buzzing sound grew louder, and our nerves began ratcheting-up as we continued standing there squinting our eyes out into the distance trying to make out who (or what) it was – shuffling about in our stances – half-fretting, half-wondering, shaking our heads, furrowing our brows, speculating apprehensively ... until Wing finally let out a sigh of relief and looked over reassuringly at Olof.

“Ooohhh phew.” He said letting out his breath and looking rather relieved. “I know who it is, huh Olof?”

Olof just stood there. Gazing out there himself. With his hands covering his eyes to block out the sun. Then slowly started nodding his head along in agreement. “Oh yeah ...” He nodded. “It her.”

Her? I thought.

Ohhhhh.

Mama'san.

And apparently a whole gaggle of Ladybugs, Mudbugs and Ladyboys all rolling up the dirt-cobblestone road in some kind of fighter-pilot, V-style-flight formation with Mama'san in the lead vehicle and the rest of her crew drafting along behind her on their tiny little Honda Scoopy motorbikes. Doubled and tripled-up. Like a pack of Balinese Hell's Angels coming into town to wreak havoc on whatever lay in front of them. Which in our case was to be our upcoming hippie and influencer guests.

Oh boy.

"Yup, it her." Wing added confidently. "It 12pm now and she say she have all that stuff delivered by 10am and it take 2hrs to get here from Mudbug Mansion. So has to be her."

I peered back out into the distance. To get a better view of them. And could see that Mama'san wasn't even on one of the little Honda Scoopy motorbikes like the rest of them were. And wasn't even on a motorbike at all. She was on one of those little Tuk-Tuk taxis you'd see over in Bangkok, Thailand. Those little 3-wheeled golf cart-looking things with flashing neon lights and decorative advertising signs all over them. Which were very eye-catching for marketing purposes.

So I turned back to him.

"Is Mama'san in one of those Tuk-Tuk's you see over in Thailand?"

"Oh yeah." He answered assuredly. "She like them so much when she over there she have one brought back over here."

Really?

I gazed back out at it again. Squinting my eyes harder at it. And noticed it actually looked a bit different from the other Tuk-Tuk's you'd see over in Bangkok, Thailand. Hers looked like it was even more done-up and fancy.

"Why does hers look even fancier than the other Tuk-Tuk's you see over in Thailand?"

"I have her murder it out." He added confidently. Seemingly pleased with the work he'd had done to it. "It so fly now."

Fly?

"When she bring it here it just regular Tuk-Tuk. But I tell her to let me take it to chop-shop and pimp it out for her so she can advertise Ladybugs Spa all over it. So I have them put 24" spinners on it, extra flashing neon lights, fuzzy dice balls on mirror, leopard-skin upholstery and super fly paint job that say 'Ladybugs Spa' all over it ... with naked Ladyboy mud-flaps on the back."

I scrunched my face up. Wondering what the silhouette of a naked Ladyboy looked like on the back of a mud-flap. But decided to ask him a different question instead.

"Was she happy with the results?"

"Well ..." He paused. Now looking up at the sky for a moment. Apparently deep in thought. "Nahhh ..." He finally admitted. "She say it look dumb and yell at me to change it. Then storm off. But I no change it and figure she forget about it sooner or later. Or else just warm up to it."

Hmmmm ... yeah, I guess anything's possible.

I stared back out in the distance and could see Mama'san just sitting there in the backseat of her murdered-out Tuk-Tuk. Fully reclined. Arms stretched out on the tops of the backseat. Looking rather poised and regal. Like you would imagine a North Korean Great Leader to look like en-route between different speaking engagements. With her two little Trainees sitting in the front seat driving. Wearing their matching white medical lab coats, ‘Trainee’ labels on them, oversized glasses on their faces and iron chopsticks through the back of their hair. With the rest of the Ladybugs, Mudbugs and Ladyboys all drafting along behind them. Laughing and giggling and appearing to be having a really good time.

They finally got to the last section of dirt-cobblestone road and pulled into the main valet parking area – out of eyesight from us – until about 30-seconds later they re-emerged from around the southwest corner of the hotel and marched over to the edge of the little dirt path and stopped and stared out onto the rice fields and all the beach ladies and other locals all working away out there.

Mama’san looked very regal standing there. Arms crossed. Staring out at all the workers. Impressed. Nodding her head up and down. With her two little twin Trainees flanked on either side of her also nodding their heads up and down. Impressed. And the Ladybugs, Mudbugs, and Ladyboys all standing quietly behind them at a respectful distance. Solemn and deferent.

Olof then whistled and Mama’san looked up towards the verandah, tilted her head back and gave off a nod of recognition, then began marching out onto the little dirt path over to the west-side of the matching 10’ marble staircases, up the stairs and out onto the verandah with her accompanying entourage of Ladybugs, Mudbugs, and Ladyboys all following several paces behind her.

She then marched over to the edge of the marble railing – about 40’ away from us – and looked out onto the rice fields – where the workers were all working away out there and setting things up. Then over towards the eastern side of the rice fields – where the other industries were – and gave off an impressed ‘Mmmmmm’ ... sound. While her two little twin baby parrots looked up at her, then back at the industries, and gave off similarly impressed ‘Mmmmmm’ ... sounds as well.

The four of us just stood there. Watching it all. Until she finally turned around and locked her eyes on Olof first.

“Olof!” She barked.

He stopped. And paused. And considered what to say.

“Yes ... Hello ... What’s up ... How are you?”

She continued to stare at him. Suspiciously. Then finally, “Mmmmmm ...” was all she said. And nothing else. And her two little twin Trainees said “Mmmmmm ...” and nothing else too.

Then she noticed me and her mood and voice all of a sudden changed back to the sweet and sexual one I remembered from the Mudbug Mansion.

“Ooohhhh, Mr. Jeff.” She said with her eyes now widening and purring softly. “So good see you again. So handsome. Big muscles.”

Lakeisha then turned to me with an incredibly-odd expression on her face. But I was too busy blushing and almost curtsying. I mean she really did know how to make a guy feel special.

“Oh, Hello Mama’san.” I answered back. “Thank you so much for coming up here and for all you have done for us. We are so very grateful to you.”

“Oh, yeesssss, of course Mr. Jeff ... for you anything ...” She said giving me another sweet and seductive look and I think she even winked at me behind those oversized dark-lensed glasses. Then resumed scanning around the verandah when her voice all of a sudden changed back to her usual loud and jarring.

“Where Wing-Wang!” She demanded. Sounding like she expected an answer rather quickly.

Though luckily, Wing wasn’t hiding behind a potted plant or anything this time. Just standing behind Lakeisha. Somewhat hidden behind her larger-than-him stature.

"I here!" He waved. Peeking around the side of Lakeisha and smiling back at her. Which was odd seeing him act so nice and friendly when I was used to seeing him try to hide and then talk smack about how bossy she was. And figured it must be one of those odd mother/son relationships where he had to pretend to be annoyed by her in front of his friends but really secretly needs and loves her.

She then changed her voice back to that of a satisfied mother cat upon seeing one of her little kittens safe and secure. "Mmmmm ... yes." She purred. "There you are." And her two little baby parrots gave off similar-sounding purrs as well.

"You behaving self?"

"Yeeesssssss ..." He groaned and rolled his eyes. "I behave self." Like, c'mon mom, not in front of my friends.

"Good." She nodded back. "You eat vegetables?"

"Yeeesssss ... I eat them." Very annoyed.

I quickly glanced over at Lakeisha who had an even more bewildered look on her face now.

"Why no fix Tuk-Tuk?!" She squawked at him.

"Ugghhhh ..." He groaned some more. "I fix it. No worry. I take care of it."

"Mmmmmm ..." She grunted. Probably not really buying that. While her two little baby parrots gave him disapproving Mmmmm's as well. Not really buying it.

She then noticed Lakeisha and stopped. Staring right at her. Somewhat puzzled by her.

"Who dis?!" She inquired. Focusing directly on her. Trying to figure out who she was and what she was doing there. Though luckily, Olof intervened to make the appropriate introduction since it was probably important that Mama'san like her and I assumed Olof had the best chance of making that happen.

"Mama'san this is our dear friend Lakeisha. She is from United States. And has Master's Degree from prestigious University there. And is social worker. Helping the poor and unfortunate. Giving back to community. And greater good."

It seemed like Olof knew exactly what Mama'san was looking for.

"Mmmmmm ... yes." She stared at her impressed. "Give back to community. Greater good." Scanning her up and down while nodding her head along approvingly.

Lakeisha just stood there. Quietly. Completely still. Probably unsure of what was going on here. Or what was going to happen next.

Mama'san then walked closer to her. Continuing to examine her. Head to toe. Inquisitively. Admirably. Scanning her up and down. Now walking around her. Encircling her. Eyeing her more curiously. Seemingly pleased. "She no Mudbug." She proudly declared as Lakeisha's jaw dropped to the floor. "She already Ladybug." Inspecting her closer and walking around her some more. Padding her shoulders and squeezing her hips. Like she was on the 'ol Ladybug auction block. "She like fine stallion." Mama'san purred admirably. "Men pay good money for this."

Oh my God.

Lakeisha looked right at me with the biggest WTF look I'd ever seen before. While I just stared back at her and clenched my teeth like, I'm so sorry ... she's like your old racist Grandma who has no clue what they're saying.

Though luckily, she just shook her head and started to chuckle a bit.

Phew.

Mama'san then grabbed her hands and inspected them closer.

"Good strong hands ... for Iron Claw."

This time I had to stare straight at the ground since there was no way I was going to be able to explain that one to her.

“Miss Lakeisha, we talk later. You very special. You come work for me anytime. I teach you art of seduction. Iron Claw. Make men yearn.”

Yearn?